

Remote Team Leadership

Great leaders of remote and hybrid remote/local teams are those that recognise what is missing when team members are not in the room. Great leaders work purposefully to recreate these elements.

Critical missing elements include:

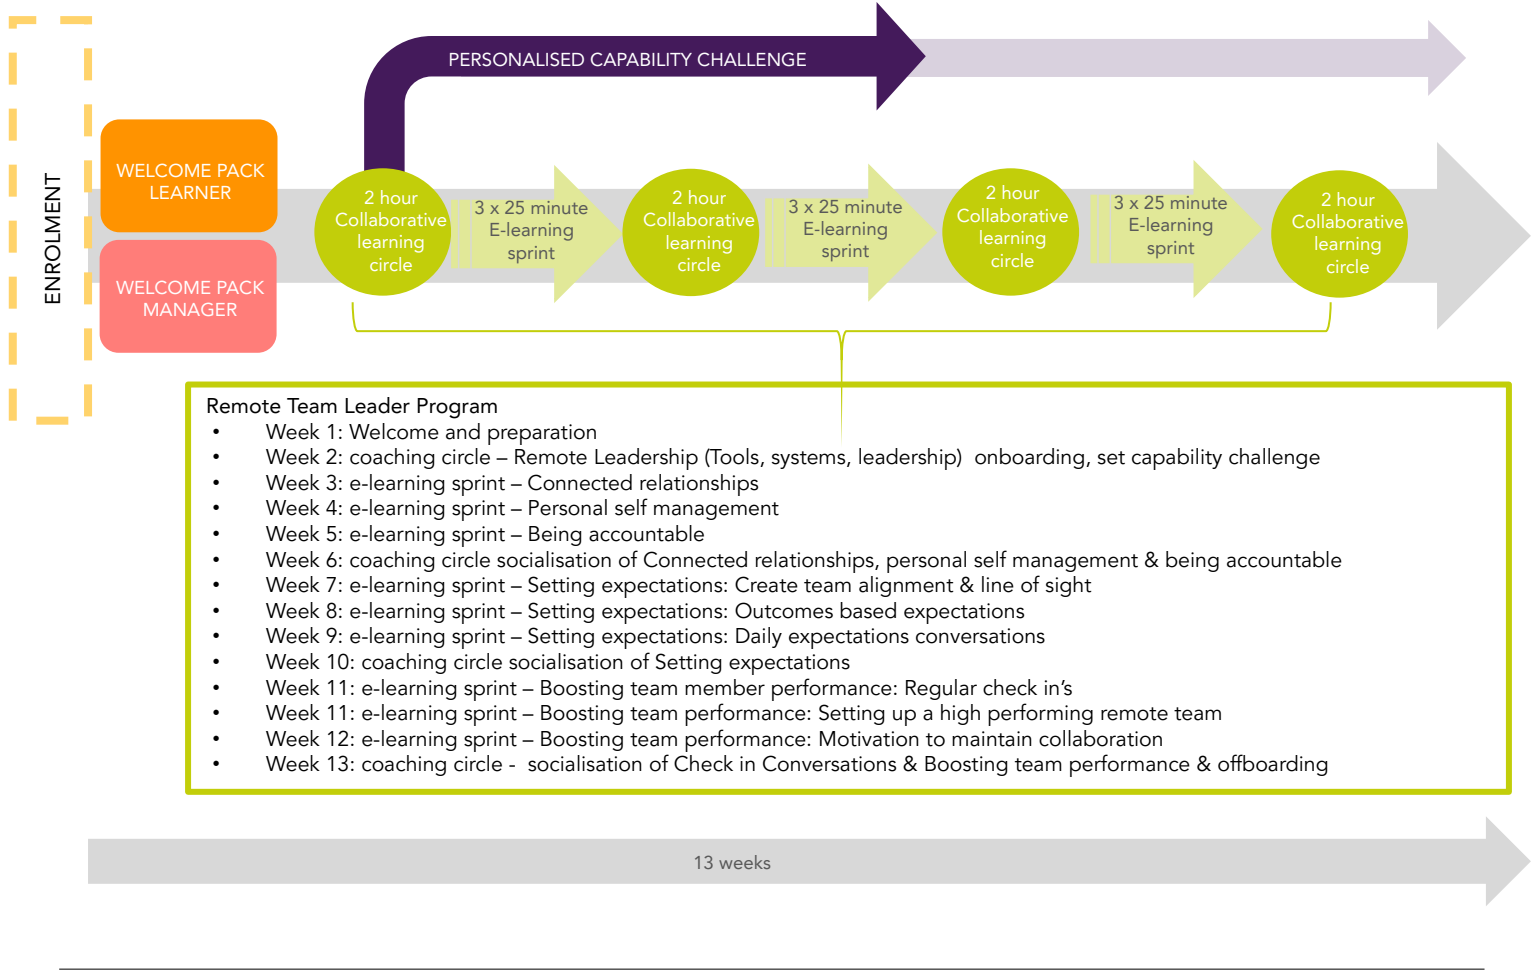

- Corridor conversations
- Connected relationships
- Team bonding & collaboration
- Visual accountability

Great remote leaders understand that it is not just about technology & tools. The key to success is the alignment of tools, organisational systems and deliberate remote leadership.

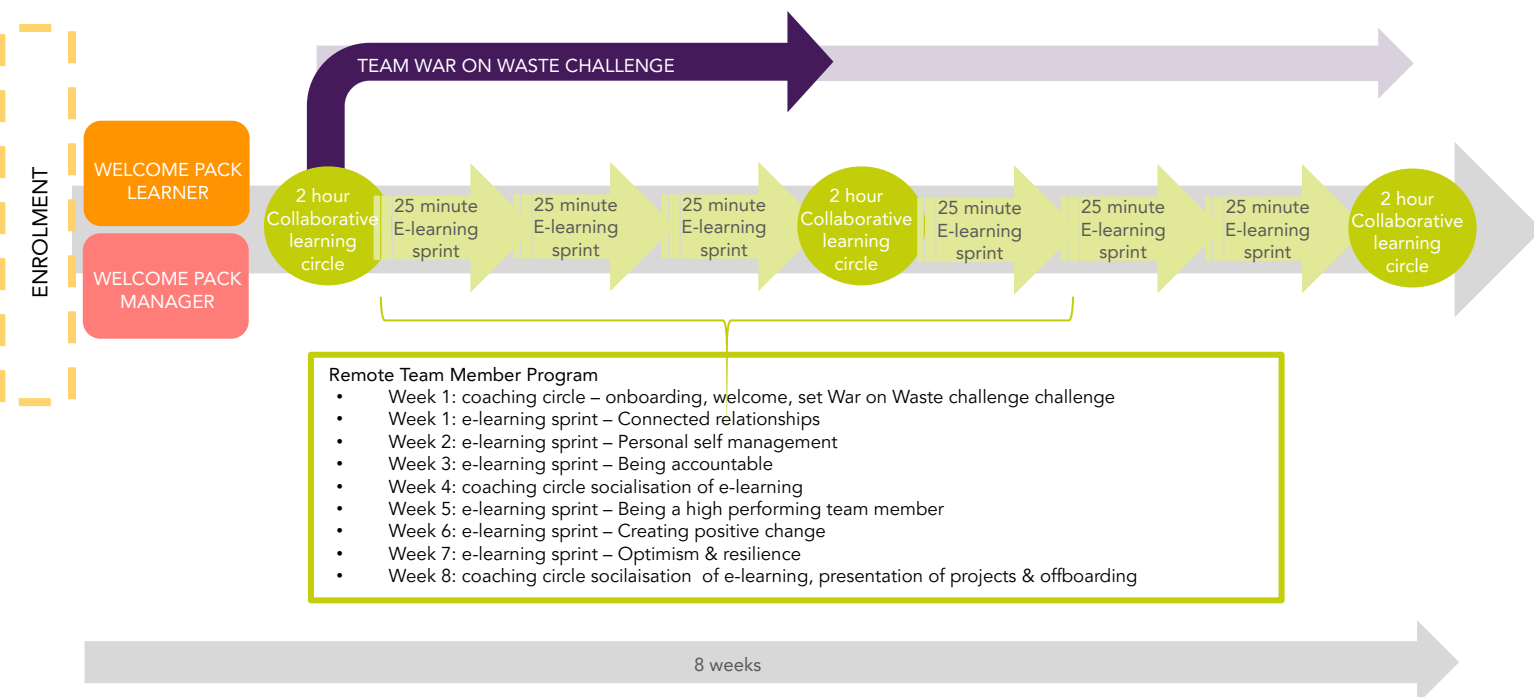

Successful organisations with remote or hybrid teams also consider team members and the skills they need to deliver on outcomes when leadership is not visibly there. Everyone needs to have some new skills and accountability

Value add

- High quality Mission Cards as learner materials that communicate credibility and high value
- Pre and post evaluation can be designed to assess leadership behaviours before and after – measures behaviour change
- Visual triggers prompt learners to take action and change their behaviour once they have returned to the workplace
- Welcome packs, Manager videos / support sent after each session to involve managers and encourage accountability
- Collaborative Learning Circle methodology aligns with recent research into neuroscience and how adults learn
- E-learning that is engaging, practical and designed to deliver results for all learners
